

Frozen semen: best 'insurance policy' for your stallion

If you own a breeding stallion, you worry about him being injured, dying – or becoming infertile. While there is no insurance policy that will help restore his breeding ability once it's lost, there is a way to protect his bloodline.

John Allen of Allendale Farms, Baldwin, GA learned the hard way how important it is to “back up” your stud when his WC Eb's Super Mac was killed in a barn fire. He learned the lesson so well that now John is specializing in a leading-edge semen freezing procedure that promises results often 200% better than the industry standard.

The advantages of freezing semen include:

- Frozen semen is convenient. Semen is available at the exact moment the mare is ready to breed.
- Frozen semen is inexpensive. It ranges from $15 to $50 per dose.
- Frozen semen is practical. Using frozen semen during show season may allow your stallion to be more competitive.
- Frozen semen is available. In the event of a stallion's injury or death, frozen semen provides insurance that you can carry on his bloodline.
- Frozen semen is shippable. Frozen semen can be shipped anywhere including internationally.

According to John Allen, most stallions freeze well and usually produce numerous doses of semen. The semen, stored in a liquid nitrogen tank, will last for decades. Stallion owners can maintain their own tanks or have the semen stored at Allendale Farms for a monthly charge.

Allendale Farms has had excellent success with frozen semen with conception rates equivalent to fresh or cooled semen.

Allendale Farms operates from a 14-foot, mobile collection center housed in a trailer that can come directly to your farm to collect and freeze your stallion's semen. The average price per collection and freezing is $450.

John Allen is breeding manager at Linda Smith Stables, in Maysville, GA, where they stand the top stallions including WC Perfect Cut, WC Cut Above All, Old Federal Pride, Skywatch's Dream Catcher and Mr. Sky High.
